IN CYBER NEWS

THE MEDIA HUB
OF DIGITAL TRUST

INCYBER NEWS

- An international media outlet dedicated to digital trust, targeting both cyber decision-makers and C-level executives.

AGORA

- An international think tank contributing to public debate through numerous publications, white papers, and studies.

Cybersecurity is no longer a backroom technical issue - it is a matter of national survival, strategic positioning, and public trust. Nowhere is this more evident than in Japan.

Over the past year, Japan has faced a surge of sophisticated cyber attacks. From JAXA, the national space agency, to the Cybersecurity Agency (NISC), and Japan Aviation Electronics, no sector has been spared. The June 2023 ransomware attack that paralyzed the Port of Nagoya was a dramatic reminder: Japan's digital infrastructure is a strategic target.

These incidents have shaken public confidence and spurred a long-overdue awareness. Influential voices in the media now call Japan's cyber defenses "too little, too late." And for a nation so dependent on undersea data cables, vulnerabilities are more than just theoretical - they're existential.

But the tide is turning. Cybersecurity has become a top-five priority in the revised 2022 National Security Strategy. Japan is no longer just reacting - it is rebuilding. From investing $67 million in domestic security software to strengthening Microsoft compatibility across government systems, Japan is laying the foundation for digital sovereignty.

This is not just a technological challenge - it is a geopolitical one. Japan stands on the frontlines of democracy in Asia, facing assertive neighbors in China, Russia, and North Korea. In response, it has built a web of international alliances: the U.S.-Japan cyber dialogue, trilateral coordination with the Philippines, the ASEAN-Japan Cybersecurity Community Alliance, and cyber cooperation with NATO and the UK.

The urgency is clear. Cyber threats do not respect borders, and they do not wait for policy to catch up. Organizing a major cybersecurity event in Japan is not only timely - it is essential. It brings together minds, fosters resilience, and signals to adversaries that Japan is not just aware - but ready.

Cyber defense is no longer optional. It is Japan's next frontier.

Policy makers

Cybersecurity is where global regulation takes center stage. At Forum INCYBER, top public decision-makers gather to collaborate on a more resilient digital world, grounded in real-world insights.

Governmental entities

Government agencies shape public cybersecurity policies. They are present at the Forum, with the three main pillars: protecting critical infrastructure and sensitive data, combating cybercrime, and conducting military actions in cyberspace.

Users

Forum INCYBER: Designed for those who need cybersecurity most. The annual gathering for CISOs, CIOs, and decision-makers from businesses and organizations of all sizes.
